Professor Ernestine Schlant Bradley is a native of Germany and Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Emory University, where she also obtained her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in comparative literature. She currently teaches at the New School University in New York, and is professor emerita of German and Comparative Literature at Montclair State University in New Jersey. She has taught at Yale, Columbia, Spelman College, and SUNY Stony Brook. She has received numerous awards and distinctions, including a fellowship at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington.

Professor Bradley is the author of numerous articles and books on 20th century German and Austrian literature. Her books include The Language of Silence: West German Literature and the Holocaust (1999), which offers an analysis of West German literature and its efforts to come to terms with the Holocaust. Her latest book, The Way Home: A German Childhood, an American Life, recounts her childhood in Germany during and after WWII and her move to the U.S. as an adult.
