“People develop as participants in cultural communities. Their development can be understood only in light of the cultural practices and circumstances of their communities—which also change.”

-Barbara Rogoff (2003:3-4)

Course Description

This course will provide students with an introduction to key concepts, principles, and debates in the field of human development. This course takes an overview of human lives, considering development and influences on development from birth to death. It focuses on how human development from the beginning cannot be understood at the individual level; it is a socially constituted process. It focuses on how human development and health throughout the course of life are shaped by many important social environments and forces – families, schools, neighborhoods, peer groups, work organizations, ideology, social policies, media, history, and culture. Our approach to human development will be sociological. My hope is that students will develop new ways of thinking about the nature of human development across the life course.

Disabilities

Additionally, please be in contact with the Coordinator of Disability Resources, ESS (Educational Services for Students). ESS is located in 470 Sears Building. The office phone number is (216) 368-5230, and the website is <http://studentaffairs.case.edu/education/disability/policy.html>.

Freedom of Expression

The classroom environment involves discussion and critical thinking. Tolerance and respect of others is an expectation within this classroom environment. Differing and sometimes controversial viewpoints may be represented in the course of class discussion. These differences enhance the learning experience and create an atmosphere where students and instructor alike will be encouraged to think, learn, and grow. On sensitive and volatile topics, students may sometimes disagree not only with each other but also with the instructor. Therefore, it is necessary that all members of class respect the views of others when expressed in classroom discussions and focus on the subject matter, not the individual(s) expressing particular views.

Changes to the Syllabus

While the best effort will be made to stay on course, occasionally changes may be made to the syllabus. This may include changes to assigned readings and/or due dates for assignments. Changes will be announced in class, and it is the student's responsibility to adhere to those changes.

Classroom Etiquette

Arriving late to class, leaving early, and coming in and out of the room is distracting to others around you. Obviously sometimes this is unavoidable, but please be courteous by keeping these distractions to a minimum. At the beginning of class, please ensure that your cell phone is turned off. Texting is strictly prohibited.

Academic Integrity Policy

All forms of academic dishonesty including cheating, plagiarism, misrepresentation, and obstruction are violations of academic integrity standards. Cheating includes copying from another's work, falsifying problem solutions or laboratory reports, or using unauthorized sources, notes or computer programs. Plagiarism includes the presentation, without proper attribution, of another's words or ideas from printed or electronic sources. It is also plagiarism to submit, without the instructor's consent, an assignment in one class previously submitted in another. Misrepresentation includes forgery of official academic documents, the presentation of altered or falsified documents or testimony to a university office or official, taking an exam for another student, or lying about personal circumstances to postpone tests or assignments. Obstruction occurs when a student engages in unreasonable conduct that interferes with another's ability to conduct scholarly activity. Destroying a student's computer file, stealing a student's notebook, and stealing a book on reserve in the library are examples of obstruction. <http://studentaffairs.case.edu/office/judicial/policies/integrity.html>.
