for
The Richard A. Zdanis Research Fellowship Award

To: All Department Chairs and Program Directors

From: Charles E. Rozek, Dean
School of Graduate Studies

Date: December 13, 2006

The School of Graduate Studies is pleased once again to announce that we are accepting nominations for the Zdanis Award which is a fellowship fund in honor of Provost and University Vice President Emeritus and Professor Emeritus of Physics Richard A. Zdanis. The purpose of the fund is to provide $5,000 in financial support to help Ph.D. candidates complete work on their dissertations.

The departmental Chair or program directors, in consultation with department faculty, designate the department's nominee for the Zdanis Award. Each academic department may nominate only one candidate. This award cannot supplant existing funding received by the student.

Nominees must have advanced to candidacy and be actively engaged in their research projects. To be eligible the nomination must receive an endorsement by the CWRU faculty member who serves as the doctoral student's research advisor and can articulate the student's academic promise. The endorsement must also include a statement as to the ways in which the project demonstrates the following: research creativity, the rationale for conducting the study, the research's importance for advancing knowledge in the student's field and the expected contribution of the research to the student's field of practice (if applicable). The research advisor should also provide a statement of why this fellowship will not supplant funding the student would otherwise receive and a list of current and pending research funding. In addition, the nominee must also submit a statement indicating the nature of their research and how the award could be used to enhance their research as well as furthering their personal and professional development after their receipt of the doctoral degree. Along with this statement, the nominee will need to submit a CV (2 pages maximum) giving a brief synopsis of relevant employment, teaching, research, publications and awards. Nominations and all supporting materials are to be emailed to denise.douglas@case.edu.

The deadline for submission of nominations is Monday, January 22, 2007.
